Becoming More Visible

2016 73 min CC The Video Project

"Becoming More Visible is a groundbreaking film that hopes to elevate and generate awareness about the realities plaguing transgender youth."* -Huffington Post

"Recommended...this revealing documentary underscores the problems, triumphs, emotions, and feelings of four determined young adults..."* - Booklist

"... well-suited to fostering classroom or community discussion of LGBTQ+ acceptance."* - -School Library Journal

Are you Male or Female? For the four fearless young transgender adults featured in this film this is not a simple question. These four defy societal norms to be their true selves and become more visible. No transition is easy, but for some it is easier than for others. BECOMING MORE VISIBLE shines a humanizing light on their different stories, both their struggles and their triumphs, and showcases the importance of having a steady support system. The film also briefly goes over the physical process some of them decide to take in transitioning. (LANGUAGE ADVISORY - Expletive and brief reference to male genitalia)

Handling Bullies When You're LGBTQ

2019 CC 20 min Human Relations Media

Did you know that young people who identify as LGBTQ are at an increased risk for bullying? Young people who do not adhere to gender norms or "typical" heteronormative behavior are much more likely to be targeted for being different, even if they aren't "out." This program takes an in-depth look at the consequences of bullying in the LGBTQ community, including depression, truancy, substance abuse and even suicide. In fact, LGBTQ youth contemplate suicide at 3x the rate of heterosexual peers. Viewers hear from LGBT young people who have experienced bullying first hand. Psychologist Robert Eckstein, discusses the emotional and physical effects of bullying on LGBTQ youth, and what they can do to combat bullying and feeling safe.

Gender Splendour Week at The Grove Community School in Toronto promotes mental health wellness, community activism, and social justice. In this documentary, children and teachers from the school were interviewed during Gender Splendour week. Amid workshops, non-binary-conforming and cisgender identifying children have the opportunity to ponder, question, and defy gender stereotypes, which are prevalent in society, culture, and the media. The documentary suggests that this progressive approach should be adopted in all schools across Canada to increase awareness of violence against LGBT children and teens.

Winner - Best International Environmental Film - Doc LA Film Festival 2016

Narrated by Emma Thompson, this documentary examines the rise of extreme energy extraction in Canada and its impact on the environment, economy and local communities. The fossil fuel industry's intensive hunt for unconventional non-renewables, including Arctic drilling and shale gas fracking, also gives rise to a formidable array of scientists, authors and activists who envision a post-growth economic future premised on co-operation, social justice and ecological stewardship.

Toad People: What Does it Take to Save a Species?

2018 CC 52 & 76 min versions Wilderness Committee

WINNER IMPACT AWARD – Wildscreen Film Festival 2018

Every year in early summer when the weather starts to warm up, a rural road in the community of Ryder Lake in Chilliwack, BC starts moving. Tiny dark spots cover the road like a carpet. Fingernail-sized juvenile western toads have begun their migration – from the wetlands where they were born to the forest where they live. For the toadlets, the journey is hazardous. Many of them will never get to the other side of the road.

Local Chilliwack resident Steve Clegg grew up with toads – catching tadpoles in his parents' pond, stumbling upon juveniles in his garden and gradually learning to look after species at risk in his backyard. Clegg and a group of local residents became concerned about the toads' plight and looked for ways to help the species survive in an environment where urban development is taking over.

Toad People tells the story of people like Steve Clegg and other families and communities who are taking action to save the wildlife in their backyard, whether it's toads, mountain caribou, rattlesnakes or barn owls.

#I Have Seen the Change: Flood

2018 CC 16 min LeMay Media

According to Environment Canada, floods are the costliest natural disaster in Canada in terms of property damage. They are also the most common. In this production, we look at extreme weather events, in particular flooding. Using Belleville, ON as the primary example, we hear homeowners discuss their fears and experiences as the rising waters of Lake Ontario pummelled their homes and properties in the spring of 2017. Communities across the country experienced similar disasters. Brian Kelly, Manager of Sustainability for the Region of Durham discusses the importance of communities learning to adapt to the impact of climate change to mitigate the risks. Important infrastructure changes must take place across the country as many culverts, drainage ditches, river banks, roads and bridges were designed for the climate we experienced 50+ years ago. For too long, we have fuelled the needs of industry at the expense of the environment and safety of our communities.

There has never been a better time to rethink our relationship to our shorelines. We are seeing one of the greatest migrations of all times towards coastal cities at precisely the moment we should consider retreat. 70% of the world's coastlines are vulnerable to sea level rise.

The surge of coastal tourism, the increased dumping of industrial waste, and development projects in wetlands are threatening the very ecosystems that protect us from flooding. This is exacerbated by the impacts of climate change with rising seas, higher temperatures, and violent storms. What can we learn from those living on the coast, the frontline of environmental change?

From remote islands to dense urban cities, meet 43 people from 9 countries, on the frontlines, taking action, discovering solutions for a sustainable future.

Unmasking Influenza

2018 50 min CC Sound Venture

This documentary explores how the Spanish Flu in 1918 rapidly spread across Canada, decimating urban, rural and Indigenous populations. Through interviews with experts we determine whether or not Canada is prepared. And, through archival film, stills and testimonials from historical experts, we recount how our nation and the world were not prepared to deal with such a virulent pandemic in 1918. We'll also lift the lid on the early development and distribution of flu vaccines in 1918 and highlight the leaps and bounds Canada has made in vaccine development (being a world leader), and how the current vaccine industry would react to various scenarios, such as flu strain mutation.

First Contact, Season 1 & 2

By and large, Canadians' opinions about the Indigenous people of this country are formed without any knowledge of the culture's true history or firsthand experience of the present-day communities. This may explain the prevalence of racist, unsympathetic and generally prejudicial attitudes that are often directed towards this community. First Contact, Season 1 and 2 takes six Canadians on a 28-day journey intended to challenge these attitudes and shed a light on the true Indigenous experience - each season with different people and different stories. The travelers, all with strong opinions about Indigenous people, have been invited to leave their everyday lives behind and embark on a unique journey, travelling deep into the Indigenous communities throughout Canada. It is a journey that will challenge their perceptions and confront their prejudices about a world they never imagined they would see.

First Contact: Season 1

2018 3 x 45' each First Contact Canada Inc.

Episode 1: The Journey Begins

Begins in Winnipeg where the group meet Indigenous activist Michale Redhead Champagne; engage with the Bear Clean patrol and Drag the Red, two community driven movements. They then travel to the remote Inuit community of Kimmirut.

Episode 2: A Group Divided

The group learns some tough lessons in the fly-in community of Muskrat Dam - the legacy of residential schools and access to clean drinking water. They head to Alberta to attend a Pow Wow and sweat lodge ceremony.

Episode 3: A Road to Healing

The group spend time in an Edmonton prison and then their final stop is in Ahousaht First Nation on Vancouver Island. It is here that they take the final key steps in their journey, and process all they have learned during this once in a lifetime experience.

Episode 2: Changing the Lens

The six participants travel south to Thunder Bay, where a number of tragic incidents have exposed racist attitudes towards Indigenous people. Then, a meeting with residential school survivors in southern Ontario shocks the participants.

Episode 3: Bridging the Divide

Traveling to northern Saskatchewan, the six travelers face their biggest test yet as they meet with people from communities deeply affected by the death and trial of Colten Boushie. Finally, the group travels to the Yukon, where self-governance is helping a community flourish.

Indigenous People are reaching back into their history and harnessing their ancestral Knowledge as a way to decolonize the current narrative and build a stronger, brighter future for their descendants. It's not about changing history; it's about shifting the paradigm and building a better, more sustainable future for everyone.

In this series, we will tell the Indigenous side of the story, journeying into Indigenous communities to find those at the forefront of this reclamation movement and hear their stories.

Through the lens of our passionate, truth-seeking storytellers, Future History II will capture the imagination and incite debate and discussion around history as we know it and as we've never heard it before.

Directed by Jennifer Podemski, and written by Tamara Podemski, Future History is committed to exploring the diversity of perspectives and knowledge within the Indigenous community and sharing it with our viewers, in an effort to create a deeper understanding about our shared history while looking forward to a brighter future, one anchored in Indigenous Knowledge.

Indigenous explorers go back to basics to experience life as their ancestors once lived

2018 13 x 22' Produced by Buck Productions

Merchants of the Wild mixes survival, nature and adventure, as six indigenous adventurers learn what it takes to complete a fur trade mission similar to the ones their ancestors would have endured in Northern Canada over 400 years ago.

Travelling in birch bark canoes, the brave group is taught by Elders and 'Knowledge Keepers', learning to make tools and use skills passed on orally through generations. These teachings are essential to their survival, as they take to the land with no modern technology on a voyage that will leave them forever changed.

The diverse group must survive for 25 days, using their collective knowledge and courage to find food, make shelter, endure freezing nights and battle an emotional journey to reconnect them with the land of their forefathers.

NOTE: This 13-part series is filmed over the course of a 25-day journey. Ideally it is watched in sequence, however, individual programs have a specific focus and can be watched individually if you are wishing to focus on specific themes.

(Dis)placed: Indigenous Youth and the Child Welfare System

2017 CC 42 min Melissa Brittain

Canada's colonial practice of forcibly removing Indigenous children from their families did not end with the closing of Indian residential schools. It continues today in the form of provincial and territorial child welfare systems, which remove Indigenous children and youth at alarmingly high rates.

This film features the voices of Indigenous youth as they reflect on their prior involvement with child welfare and share their multiple strategies of resistance to assimilation and state control. Adding to these insights, First Nations child advocate Cindy Blackstock traces the term 'neglect', the main rationale for child welfare removals, to its roots in the residential school system, and points to laws that codify structural discrimination, the leading cause of child welfare (dis)placements.

"History repeats itself in the Canadian documentary The Issue of Mr. O'Dell. This respectful portrait of Civil Rights activist Jack O'Dell discusses institutionalized racism past and present. O'Dell dissects the USA's tumultuous and ongoing history of racism in soft-spoken interviews. Director Rami Katz lets O'Dell recount his own story in his own words, and the wisdom of the 94-year-old activist speaks to the present as his experiences fighting alongside Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. resonate strongly with the Black Lives Matter movement." - Point of View Magazine

This award-winning, short documentary film examines the lifelong work of a pioneering civil rights activist and organizer, Jack O'Dell, who was at one time a close colleague of Martin Luther King, Jr. A former member of the Communist Party, O'Dell was followed by the FBI, labelled the number-five Communist in America by President Kennedy, and was eventually forced out of King's organization.

At age 94, O'Dell eloquently speaks to issues concerning the civil rights struggle, both with respect to his historical involvement and to its contemporary incarnation under the stewardship of groups like Black Lives Matter. He continues to passionately address the problems of systemic racism and inequality in North America.

Marijuana: Just the Facts Please

2017 CC 20 min Human Relations Media

There is still a great deal of confusion surrounding marijuana and its effects on the mind and body. This straightforward program does not preach or distort, but simply supplies students with the latest science-based information. Does marijuana use cause cancer? Is marijuana addictive? Does marijuana lower IQ? Is Marijuana a gateway drug? Is marijuana valuable as a medicine? These and other questions are explored by scientists and physicians and contrasted with generally held opinions by the public, teenagers and college students.

The Stairs

2016 CC 95 min Midnight Lamp Films Inc.

WINNER: BEST CANADIAN FILM - Toronto Film Critics Association
"Filmmaker finds hope in the haunted but humane souls of outreach workers... this timely, intelligent and important Canadian documentary... give(s) subjects the time and space they need to tell their own stories." - Winnipeg Free Press

Shot over the course of several years, Hugh Gibson's profoundly affecting and compassionate documentary examines the lives of habitual drug users in Toronto's Regent Park.

The Stairs tells the story of Marty, Greg and Roxanne, who each survived decades of street-involvement. Using their experiences to ease the paths of others, they perform social work in their old neighbourhood (Regent Park), while struggling to maintain their newly-found stability. Told over five years, The Stairs examines life on society's margins. Defying stereotypes through intimate portraits, its remarkable subjects are surprising, funny, shocking and moving.

A documentary about opioid drug addiction through a pediatric suboxone clinic run by Dr. Fred Holmes in Vermont. Dr. Holmes prescribes suboxone to his patients struggling with prescription drug addiction. Much like methadone, suboxone helps many addicts in their recovery process— for some taking suboxone is a crucial stepping stone to long term recovery, for others it is a crutch, for others suboxone is abused and diverted onto the street. Through the film we see Dr. Holmes struggling with these challenges and trying to make sense and keep the faith in the midst of many contradictions.

Who's looking after your loved ones in their home, and who's protecting personal care workers from their patients? In this investigation by Sandie Rinaldo, W5 tried to find out how many seniors are assaulted in their homes by care workers. Ontario's long-term care act requires facilities to report incidents to the province and to police. But at home it's up to the families to take action and not all do. It's also up to agencies to do background checks on the PSWs they are sending to look after innocent seniors. It doesn't always happen.

2015 CC 90 min Indiecan Entertainment

Official Selection – HotDocs World Showcase Category
“Stuffed with inspiring footage.” – The Globe and Mail
“A sweeping cinematic look at the politics of breastfeeding and birth” – Michelle Latimer
Nominated Best Documentary at the Hollywood Film Festival

According to UN estimates, the lives of 1.4 million infants could be saved by breastfeeding. The organization reminds that children who are breastfed are six times more likely to survive the early months than those who aren't. In countries lacking resources, this is a matter of life and death, as is shown in this documentary. Through an intimate and artistic lens, Milk brings a universal perspective on the politics, commercialization and controversies surrounding birth and infant feeding over the canvas of stunningly beautiful visuals and poignant voices from around the globe. Inspiring, informative, provocative and sensitive, Milk celebrates bringing a new life into this world with a strong call to action and reflection.

Carved by Tlingit genius artist Kadjisdu.axtc in the late 1700s, the Whale House is considered by many the "Sistine Chapel" of North America Native Art. For centuries southern museums and art dealers coveted the Whale House treasures. They were eventually stolen and taken to Seattle. After years of struggle, the community regained control of their art and returned the historic treasures to Klukwan. A condition of the return of the art was for the community to provide an appropriate home. After years of effort, the Whale House is now open to the public.

Maker of Monsters: The Extraordinary Life of Beau Dick

2017 92 min CC Athene Films Inc.

WINNER Cultural Currents Award: 2018 Victoria Film Festival

Maker of Monsters gives an intimate look into the life of one of Canada's greatest artists. The late Beau Dick was a Kwakwaka'wakw carver from Alert Bay, a small remote village on the Northwest Coast of British Columbia. His remarkable masks have been celebrated across the global art scene as vibrant expressions of West Coast Indigenous culture and a sophisticated crossover into the contemporary art world. This film strives to capture the essence of Beau Dick and his mysterious enigma as an artist who symbolized Canada's history with the Indigenous and the ethical dilemmas faced in reconciling with that colonialist history.
