THE LADY ARCHITECT

2026 24:25 min Moira Simpson Film

In 1937, Margaret Buchanan was the first woman to graduate in architecture from the University of Alberta. Her early years were full of promise, as she worked on northern projects with her engineer father and later with a leading Edmonton firm, McDonald and Magoon. Then her career stalled due to the lack of acceptance of women architects by the male dominated profession, the pressures of marriage and raising a family, and her eventual slide into alcoholism. This moving mother-daughter story is told largely by Margaret herself, speaking from audio tapes her daughter Moira Simpson recorded 50 years ago.

2025 69:46 min Two Hounds Media

Cree-Métis filmmaker Tanner Zurkoski reclaims history itself, revisiting moments of colonial tension since European contact in the 1700s along the west coast. Relying on oral traditions, and combining documentary form with animation, Zurkoski reframes mainstream narratives away from disruptions to colonial trade to look instead at the vibrant lives and cultures of the original stewards of the lands and ocean before colonialism imposed itself upon them. Through this lens, we see history reframed, complicated and contextualized.

In the age of mass-scrolling, this doc tunnels deep into one problematic popular meme and expands into a discussion of Indigenous identity and Canadian colonialism. This documentary examines how a viral meme evolved into a deeper conversation about Indigenous identity and colonialism. #skoden traces the story of Pernell Bad Arm, a Blackfoot man whose image was once used to mock Indigenous people but later became a symbol of Indigenous pride through the phrase "SKODEN." Beyond the meme, the film reveals Pernell's humanity, highlighting his kindness and struggles with homelessness while reclaiming his story from stereotype to truth.

SO YOU WANT TO BE A MUSLIM

2024 88:45 min GAPC Productions

So You Want to Be a Muslim follows five North Americans—Barbara, Stephanie, Rima, Johnae, and Eli—who left their former faiths to embrace Islam. Their journeys reveal both the diversity within the Muslim community and the emotional complexity of converting. While they find meaning and peace in their new faith, they also confront feelings of being “in between” cultures and communities. Amid Western narratives dominated by terms like “extremist” and “terrorist,” the film uses these personal stories to break stereotypes, challenge misconceptions about Islam, and explore what it means to live as a Muslim in the West today.

These award-winning films for Canadian filmmaker Sean Cisterna go hand-in-hand. Silver Screammers is a joyful full-length documentary portraying senior citizens who defy expectations by making a horror film, proving creativity and courage only deepen with age. The Rug is the short film that emerged directly from Silver Screammers. It centres around Edna, a senior aged woman who discovers that a discarded throw rug she has found will, for lack of a better word, digest anything left under it. The more it digests, the more it wants. After devouring her pesky landlord and a nosey cop, the rug has gotten so frisky that Edna finds herself trapped in her own home with no way out.
